Change the Web Challenge February 26, 2009
We're excited to be part of the Change the Web Challenge. Basically, the contest is to create a plugin, widget, mash up, hack, or other variety of web application that helps people find and share opportunities to take action. The grand prize is 50 benjis, and the best WordPress plugin will also be featured in the [...]

New and Improved Plugins Directory Search February 18, 2009
One of the biggest problems and most frequent complaints we've had with the WordPress.org Plugins Directory is the horrible, horrible search results. No longer. We're now using Sphinx (a "free open-source SQL full-text search engine") to power search on the Plugins Directory both from the website and from within your blog's ad [...]

How to make comments on Lynne Jordan's Blog

IS THERE ANYBODY OUT THERE?

I don't mean to sound all needy and shit but, well... no one leaves comments and so like I am wondering, is anyone reading this thing? And is it so boring and uninspiring that no one is even tempted to say...SOB!... hello? or Amen? or Fuck you? or anything??

Many thanks to those who do comment. It means so much. And to those who haven't yet:

Oh, please wontcha' take the time to make a girl happy?

Love to ya, got some more to post soon!

a quick excerptThe morning after: HELLO HELLO Is someone here? I was startled awake by Marie the housekeeper - thank God - or I woulda slept the entire day away. So after a bit of a chat with Maria, I got showered and dressed cause mama had to find some wireless internet access by hook, or by crook, because the apartment - for all of its wonderfulness - did not have a wireless connection. And y'all know I had to connect to all of you! So my options were: find a perfect, artsy lounge/cafe/ restaurant [...]
